From the Base camp at 2000 metres, you can start your journey up. Path is marked with red arrow on the picture and leads to the peak. It starts with slow ascent, but after some time it will be harder. The path is easy to follow. You should not have problem finding it. From the elevation of 2600 m, it is marked by white-red paint marks.

Total Distance to Khustup: 5.2 km

Average hike time: 3 hours

Elevation change: 1200 m

When you get to a level of 2350m, between the stones, which can be seen on the photo go straight forward. Do NOT follow the path left along the rocks on the left side. Just head directly to Mount Khustup.

After a few hundred meters (at level 2370m) you will come to a dense vegetation indicating water source. There may be only a little water during summer, but feel free to fill your bottles from the pipe.

The path is very easy to follow up to level 2970m. When you come to a path crossroad at this level, turn right.

After you reach the elevation 3040m, you come to a resting place with a fireplace and jeep tracks, which go towards Mount Khustup. You can have a short break here before continuing on the wide tracks towards the peak.

After you reach a level 3100m, prepare for a small climb in the part marked by a red arrow, further follow the white-red marks to the top, the path is barely visible because of stone slides.

Congratulations. You are on the top!
